

Talking about substance use – tips and resources that can help¹.

Parenting is a lot like being on a road trip. It can be fun to experience new places with your growing child, but it can also be challenging. Parents often wonder about the best way to protect their children when it comes to issues like alcohol and other drugs. Here are ten important tips parents can use to help their children (and others) navigate life successfully, including avoiding harm from alcohol and other drugs.

Stay connected – more than anything, your child needs you! Young people who know they're loved have a stronger sense of self-worth.

Have fun and focus on building a positive relationship.

Show your child you believe in them by supporting their interests and encouraging them to pursue their passions.

Help your child solve their own issues – it helps build their resilience.

Resist the urge to know everything – they're growing up and need some 'space' to find their own meaning of things.

Share clear, consistent expectations – the more you discuss these openly with your child, the more likely they will understand your intentions, and the more likely they will adopt them.

Recognize that we all make mistakes and use them as opportunities to learn together.

Expect to be challenged – be respectful and prepared to negotiate but clearly communicate your position and your own values.

Be available – by encouraging open and regular communication, you're showing your child their thoughts and concerns matter.

Be a positive role model – part of being a parent is modelling healthy behaviours and attitudes.
